

Educational Drive Is Started by American Express Company

A second educational campaign to bring the public into closer touch with the internal operations of the express business is being conducted by the American Express Company. The new effort, which is being directed chiefly at the employees of the American Railway Express Company, is called the "Making Good With the Public" drive, and the meetings held thus far have been widely attended by the employees.

The marked success with the initial campaign to secure better packing and handling of express shipments a few months ago, led the express office to probe deeper into the causes of inefficient operation, due in part to lack of intimate knowledge with rules and regulations governing the handling of express matter.

One of the striking results of the better packing and better handling movement is now announced, in the great reduction in the number of "No Mark" shipments left on the express company's hands, each month, without any means of identification. Before an effort to improve conditions was made, the number of "No Mark" shipments was about 100,000 a month. Now the number is down to about 10,000 a month. This means that the express company is now able to identify 90 percent of its shipments.

The willingness of the shipping public to meet the express company head on in the matter of better handling has led the company to give attention to other subjects needing improvement. As a result of the public co-operation, the slogan "Make Good With the Public" has been adopted for the coming year.

Get together meetings of employees in every city and town in the country, attended by a national committee, are being held simultaneously with the local meetings. Specialized "Shop Talks" dealing with the various subjects of importance of express handling are being given by the national committee. The first of these was held in New York City, and the second in Chicago. The third is being held in St. Louis, Mo., and the fourth in Kansas City, Mo.

TROMPELOUP CAPTURED BY BLUEJACKETS

Sailors Did Their Fighting With Picks and Shovels

BY WELLS HAWK.

Some of these days when all of our heroes are back from the war and have come down under the big top to again show us the glories of war, we shall hear some "veteran" blarney tell us that the battle of Trompeloup was the greatest battle of the war. And who shall we believe? The man who says so, or the man who says so?

There is no doubt that the battle of Trompeloup was a very important battle. It was a battle in which the French army, under the command of General Foch, defeated the German army, under the command of General Hindenburg. The battle was fought on June 17, 1918, and it was a very important battle. The Fertile Valley of the Nile

The Rio Grande Valley has the most wonderfully fertile soil in the whole Southwest. Its possibilities are unlimited. Around Raymondville the valley soil is at its best; rich and exceedingly productive, it is adapted to cotton, corn and all forage crops. For the growing of melons and citrus fruits it is unexcelled.

We have this land, improved and unimproved, in tracts from 40 acres up, which we are now offering at very conservative prices.
